

Tom Moore
Vice President, Innovation
Healthix, Inc.

Tom has worked in information technology for over 20 years including software development, business process reengineering and management in government, financial services, telecommunications, professional publishing, life sciences and health care. He is currently the Vice President of Innovation for Healthix, a leading Regional Health Information Organization (RHIO) providing services in metro New York City to millions of patients and thousands of providers from hospitals, physician practices, home health agencies, nursing homes and managed care organizations. In addition to leading several major interoperability initiatives Tom works closely with Healthix members to define and design information services to support improvements in care coordination across disparate organizations.