

Tom Moore
Vice President, Innovation
Healthix, Inc.

Tom Moore has worked in information technology for over 20 years. His experience encompasses software development, business process reengineering and management in the government sector, financial services, telecommunications, life sciences and health care space. Tom is also a published research author.

Tom Moore is the Vice President of Innovation for Healthix, a leading Regional Health Information Organization (RHIO) providing health information exchange (HIE) services to hundreds of hospitals and health systems, physician practices, home health agencies, nursing homes, managed care organizations and a growing number of social service agencies in the greater New York region. Healthix facilitates care coordination for over 10 million patients in Manhattan, Brooklyn, Staten Island, Queens and Long Island. In addition to leading several major interoperability initiatives, Tom is working closely with Healthix members to define and design information sharing services to support improvements in care coordination across disparate systems, support new and emerging models of care and innovate solutions for providers and their patients using the power of health IT and HIE in partnership with the Statewide Health Information Network for New York (SHIN-NY).
